THE PROBLEM CYBERSEX TRAFFICKING

Cybersex trafficking is a form of modern slavery that was unimaginable before the digital age. Cybersex trafficking is the live sexual abuse of children streamed via the internet, set up by adults who receive online payments from predators and pedophiles located anywhere in the world.

The Philippines government made rapid strides in its fight against sex trafficking since IJM arrived in Cebu in 2006. One independent study found 79% fewer children being sold for sex in metro Cebu after four years of IJM's collaborative work. Now, law enforcement officials need specialized training and support as they investigate and rescue children from cybersex trafficking, and survivors need specialized aftercare services and a long-term support system to thrive in freedom.

THE FACTS

The Philippines receives thousands of cybersex trafficking case referrals a month from the U.S. alone.¹

54% of victims rescued in IJM cases are 1-12 years old. The average age of commercial sex trafficking victims was 16-17 years old.²

Pedophiles and predators pay $20 to $150 for a "sex show" broadcast online.³

“Battling the evils of cybersex crimes is a present-day challenge that is so difficult to combat, not only because they are preying on young children, but because they are concealed right inside their homes.”

-Senior Police Inspector, Cebu

How IJM Cebu Combats Cybersex Trafficking

We rescue victims by helping Philippines authorities and international law enforcement agencies identify and remove children from the places and people who are forcing them to perform sex acts for live or recorded shows broadcast online.

We bring perpetrators to justice. We help police investigate and document evidence so criminals exploiting children in front of webcams and profiting from the abuse are restrained. We help prosecutors press charges and navigate the anti-trafficking and cybercrime laws so impunity ultimately ends and others are deterred.

We restore survivors by creating customized care plans for each child. Cybersex trafficking victims have unique needs, tend to be quite young, and there are more boys than in bar- or street-based trafficking. Many survivors need to spend time in a shelter before returning home to their family or community. In addition to providing direct care and counselling, we are developing best practices and pioneering new tools for shelters handling cybersex trafficking cases.

We strengthen justice systems by providing hands-on mentoring and training for law enforcement and court officials investigating and reviewing criminal cases, and we equip social services and partner organisations that provide aftercare for sex trafficking survivors.
